JUDGE GEAR IN SOLOMON'S ROLE

Willie Ellis, bailiff of Judge Gear's court, was given fifty cents by a witness this afternoon and sent off to get a hack and bring into court two little children whom the judge wanted to question in the divorce case of Helen Clara Fonseca vs. Joseph Fonseca. The witness who gave the fifty cents was Fonseca and he gave it at the request of the judge. Fonseca had been denying his wife's statements that he never gave her any money. "If the children were here," he said, "they would tell about it, for they were present and saw me give the money every time."

Judge Gear suddenly asked the witness how much money he had with him. Fonseca had a little change. "Give the clerk fifty cents and send a hack after the children," said the judge.

Fonseca dug up fifty cents, greatly to the amusement of Mrs. Helen Clara, who had been on the stand only a few moments before in a very angry mood. She exploded with laughter when her spouse was stuck for the hack fare. Henry Hagon made an objection to sending for the children with Fonseca in the hack, but withdrew it when the judge ordered that Fonseca be prevented from speaking to them at all till they came to court.

One of the main charges brought by Mrs. Fonseca was laziness. She said Fonseca always appeared to be sick and wouldn't work. She also said she was willing to let him have the children. Judge Gear wanted to know if she was willing to abandon her children. She said that Fonseca could look after them, and she was not able to, also that he had fed them on molasses candy and peanuts till they would not go with her.

The couple were married in New Bedford, Mass., in 1890, and have five children, the youngest two years old.

INTENDED FAVOR BROUGHT MISERY

Pathetic Case of Maimed Railway Man Aboard Sonoma—Lost Both Legs and Arm.

There is a steerage passenger aboard the S. S. Sonoma bound for Massachusetts, whose case is very pathetic. William Ashton is his name. While in Australia he saved the life of the son of the Melbourne Railway Commissioner. The youth would have been drowned but for the bravery of Ashton.

Out of gratitude to the man, the commissioner secured employment for him in the railway service, but unfortunately the billet which was intended as an advancement for the man brought him only misery. He accidentally fell under a train and sustained injuries that necessitated the amputation of both legs and an arm. Incapacitated as he was the man decided that he wanted to return to his home near Boston. He was without funds so friends and others interested in his case took a subscription and paid his passage back to his home.

The passengers on the Sonoma learned of the man's distress and a fund was at once started for him. The passengers have raised considerably over 25 pounds for the man. This sum will enable him to land in San Francisco with a fair amount of money. The fund will probably be increased during the voyage from Honolulu.

WARSHIPS ARE HERE

The advance division of the Pacific squadron arrived this morning from Panama via Acapulco. The vessels in the division were the cruiser New York and the gunboat Bennington. Admiral Henry Glass, the commander-in-chief of the squadron, was aboard the flagship New York. The two vessels will remain three weeks in Honolulu awaiting the arrival of the cruisers Tacoma and Marblehead and gunboats Concord and Petrel from San Francisco.

The two vessel arrived this morning off the port shortly after 8 o'clock, but did not come into the harbor until nearly noon as there had to be some shifting of the vessels at the naval slips.

The two warships made the trip from Panama together, Acapulco
